Senator Philip Hart has indicated his intention to introduce an amendment to S. 2543 which, if adopted, would have a tremendous adverse effect on all Federal law enforcement agencies and do great harm to the Nation.

The proposed amendment would drastically change the seventh exemption set out in the Freedom of Information Act. This Act, passed in 1966, was aimed basically at regulatory agencies. It was the clear intent of the Congress to insure that its provisions could not be used to gain public access to the investigatory files of the FBI and other such agencies; hence, the passage of the seventh exemption.

Here are some of the effects which adoption of the Hart amendment would have.

1. It would distort the purpose of agencies such as the FBI, imposing on them the added burden of serving as a research source for every writer, busybody, or curious person.

2. Impose upon these agencies the tremendous task of reviewing each page of each document contained in any of their many investigatory files to make an independent judgment as to whether or not any part thereof should be released.
3. Destroy the confidence of the American people in its Federal investigative agencies since it will be apparent these agencies no longer can assure them their identities and the information they furnish in confidence for law enforcement purposes will not some day be disclosed to the subject of the conversation. This would apply whether or not the source is a paid informant supplying information on the organized underworld or a private citizen giving an honest opinion about an acquaintance.

4. Create perhaps the greatest potential for invasion of privacy which can be imagined. The fact that Senator Hart’s proposal states that information which constitutes a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy shall not be given out presupposes there must be some invasion of privacy involved in the disclosure of any information. But who is to determine what constitutes a clearly unwarranted invasion—the person reviewing the material and deciding whether or not to release it—hardly a good judge on whether or not your privacy or the privacy of your friends or relatives is being invaded by the release of any information concerning you.

5. Involve the Government in an endless number of suits filed by individuals who disagree with the investigative agencies’ decision on whether or not to release some information or for invasion of privacy because some information was released.
§ 552. Public information; agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings

(a) Each agency shall make available to the public information as follows:

(1) Each agency shall separately state and currently publish in the Federal Register for the guidance of the public—

(A) descriptions of its central and field organization and the established places at which, the employees (and in the case of a uniformed service, the members) from whom, and the methods whereby, the public may obtain information, make submittals or requests, or obtain decisions;

(B) statements of the general course and method by which its functions are channeled and determined, including the nature and requirements of all formal and informal procedures available;

(C) rules of procedure, descriptions of forms available or the places at which forms may be obtained, and instructions as to the scope and contents of all papers, reports, or examinations;

(D) substantive rules of general applicability adopted as authorized by law, and statements of general policy or interpretations of general applicability formulated and adopted by the agency;

(E) each amendment, revision, or repeal of the foregoing.

Except to the extent that a person has actual and timely notice of the terms thereof, a person may not in any manner be required to resort to, or be adversely affected by, a matter required to be published in the Federal Register and not so published. For the purpose of this paragraph, matter reasonably available to the class of persons affected thereby is deemed published in the Federal Register when incorporated by reference therein with the approval of the Director of the Federal Register.

(2) Each agency, in accordance with published rules, shall make available for public inspection and copying—

(A) final opinions, including concurring and dissenting opinions, as well as orders, made in the adjudication of cases;

(B) those statements of policy and interpretations which have been adopted by the agency and are not published in the Federal Register;

(C) administrative staff manuals and instructions to staff that affect a member of the public;

unless the materials are promptly published and copies offered for sale. To the extent required to prevent a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, an agency may delete identifying details when it makes available or publishes an opinion, statement of policy, interpretation, or staff manual or instruction. However, in each case the justification for the deletion shall be explained fully in writing. Each agency shall maintain and make available for public inspection and copying a current index providing identifying information for the public as to any matter issued, adopted, or promulgated after July 4, 1967, and required by this paragraph to be made available or published. A final order, opinion, statement of policy, interpretation, or staff manual or instruction that affects a member of the public may be relied on, used, or cited as precedent by an agency against a party other than an agency only if—

(I) it has been indexed and either made available or published as provided by this paragraph; or

(ii) the party has actual and timely notice of the terms thereof.

(3) Except with respect to the records made available under paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, each agency, on request for identifiable records made in accordance with published rules stating the time, place, fees to the extent authorized by statute, and procedure to be followed, shall make the records promptly available to any person. On complaint, the district court of the United States in the district in which the complainant resides, or has its principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, has jurisdiction to enjoin the agency from withholding agency records and to order the production of any agency records improperly withheld from the complainant. In such a case the court shall determine the matter de novo and the burden is on the agency to sustain its action. In the event of noncompliance with the order of the court, the district court may punish for contempt the responsible employee, and in the case of a uniformed service, the responsible member. Except as to causes the court considers of greater importance, proceedings before the district court, as authorized by this paragraph, take precedence on the docket over all other causes and shall be assigned for hearing and trial at the earliest practicable date and expedited in every way.

(4) Each agency having more than one member shall maintain and make available for public inspection a record of the final votes of each member in every agency proceeding.

(b) This section does not apply to matters that are—

(1) specifically required by Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of the national defense or foreign policy;

(2) related solely to the internal personnel rules and practices of an agency;

(3) specifically exempted from disclosure by statute;

(4) trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential;

(5) inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency;

(6) personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(7) investigatory files compiled for law enforcement purposes except to the extent available by law to a party other than an agency;

(8) contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of an agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions;

(9) geological and geophysical information and data, including maps, concerning wells.

(c) This section does not authorize withholding of information or limit the availability of records to the public, except as specifically stated in this section. This section is not authority to withhold information from Congress. Pub.L. 89-554, Sept. 6, 1966, 80 Stat. 883; Pub.L. 96-23, § 1, June 5, 1981, 87 Stat. 54.
