NEW YORK—Tuva Friedmann, who escaped from a concentration camp in Poland for the murder of the Jewish people, he neglected no detail. He even had grave sprung around the railroad stations, after each trainload of Jews was unloaded so the next trainload would see no trace of those who had come earlier. Everything was planned to the last detail. The Gestapo and the SS were working together.

Eichmann explained, "Hitler's govern- ment was worried about the Jewish question, and they weren't afraid to use force to get what they wanted."

"But about the time it became evident that the Jewish population was too large to handle, the SS decided that the confinement of Jews in concentration camps was too costly."

"However, this presented some problems. In the beginning, the plan was to find suitable engineering locations, but when these proved to be insufficient, the SS turned to other methods."

The execution was carried out by the army and the SS, but millions of civilians were involved. Friedmann was given the job of finding sufficient locations. He came up with a plan to make it look like the SS had been acting alone.

"When he was found, Friedmann, a decorated soldier, said he had been acting alone. The SS said he was involved.

"So Friedmann set up a training program to make it look like the SS had been acting alone."

"He was sentenced to death."

Worry Over U.S.A.

Continuing his recital of the facts, Friedmann reviewed the details which some people have forgotten or minimized in history.

"Up until the time the United States entered the war, Eichmann was in charge of the..."
