FORWARD

Report of the President

The President of the United States, Lyndon B. Johnson, submitted to Congress and to the American people a comprehensive program of domestic and foreign policy actions designed to meet the urgent needs of the nation and to advance the cause of freedom and democracy throughout the world.

The program includes a proposal for a new national policy in Vietnam, a plan for economic and social development in Africa, and a strategy for strengthening U.S. relations with Latin America.

The President emphasized the importance of international cooperation in achieving these goals and called on Congress to provide the necessary support for the administration's efforts.

The report concludes with a call for continued bipartisan support and cooperation in the face of the challenges that lie ahead.

The President's full report is attached as an appendix.
