5. To answer para 4 of [] [] stated categorically on 23 May that no tickets to the trial were available in Tel Aviv, and that the only way they could be obtained was by visiting the Tourist Information Office in Jerusalem, where they were provided on a first-come, first-served basis. [] saw the sign in the window of that office, which at the time indicated there was a several days delay before tickets were available. [] added that there were now 60 seats available for tourists, since some space originally occupied by newsmen was free, so 120 were visiting the trial each day. He said no trial tickets were available anywhere else, but added that there was a constant stream of letters from abroad, asking how to get tickets. The answer in every case suggested that the person visit the Tourist Information Office in Jerusalem, where chances were good that a ticket could be obtained without too much delay.
