Honduras: The Price of Choosing Sides

By GEORGE MEDILLAN

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras—For months now, Tass, Radio Venceremos, Radio Havana and the other propaganda organs of the international Left have been shouting that the CIA and the Honduran Army are assembling their combined might for an assault on leftist Nicaragua, which shares a 500-mile border with Honduras. Newsweek last month, according to the Associated Press, had reporting that the United States is involved in the region. This was testimony to the US involvement in the conflict in Nicaragua.

As a result of this, the Honduran authorities have been forced to take action to prevent the situation from escalating. The Honduran government has been accused of ignoring the rights of the people, and of using violence and repression to maintain control.

According to the Wall Street Journal, the US press has moved to cover the situation in the region, following reports of human rights abuses and the use of torture by the Honduran military.

The situation in Honduras is very complex, and it is difficult to determine who is responsible for the violence and repression.

In conclusion, it is clear that the US involvement in the region has had a significant impact on the situation in Honduras, and that the situation continues to be a source of concern.

U.S. press has moved to cover the situation in the region, following reports of human rights abuses and the use of torture by the Honduran military.

The situation in Honduras is very complex, and it is difficult to determine who is responsible for the violence and repression.

In conclusion, it is clear that the US involvement in the region has had a significant impact on the situation in Honduras, and that the situation continues to be a source of concern.

U.S. press has moved to cover the situation in the region, following reports of human rights abuses and the use of torture by the Honduran military.

The situation in Honduras is very complex, and it is difficult to determine who is responsible for the violence and repression.

In conclusion, it is clear that the US involvement in the region has had a significant impact on the situation in Honduras, and that the situation continues to be a source of concern.

U.S. press has moved to cover the situation in the region, following reports of human rights abuses and the use of torture by the Honduran military.

The situation in Honduras is very complex, and it is difficult to determine who is responsible for the violence and repression.

In conclusion, it is clear that the US involvement in the region has had a significant impact on the situation in Honduras, and that the situation continues to be a source of concern.